I am also working on a story about the EPA's informational page on pesticides containing a fluorinated carbon:
<https://www.epa.gov/ingredients-used-pesticide-products/pesticides-containing-fluorinated-carbon#benefits%20of%20fluorinated>

I see this page is dated 3 November. Can you confirm if this page was newly added on 3 November, or if it was updated at that time?

The Center for Biological Diversity raised a variety of criticisms about the agency's webpage and its regulatory review of pesticides that meet the OECD definition of 'PFAS'
<https://biologicaldiversity.org/w/news/press-releases/trump-epa-approves-its-first-forever-chemical-pesticide-2025-11-05/>

Would the agency like to respond to any of those points raised? For example, CBD notes that Cyclobuttrifluram can break down into trifluoroacetic acid (TFA), which can contaminate waterways. Is that something EPA considered as part of its review of cyclobuttrifluram?

I'll note that this story will be less about any specific pesticide ingredient and more about how the agency views fluorinated chemistries as part of its FIFRA reviews. I'd welcome any further comment you'd like to share on that process beyond what's on the public webpage.

Thanks,
Kelly

Hi Cora – our new webpage is ready to go, and we plan to post the page and issue our announcement about our proposed registration of epyrifanil this afternoon.

Below is a desk statement in case we get questions related to the definition issue. This is just a general statement; we can definitely pivot if we get questions related to the specific pesticide we're issuing a decision on today. I can work with the press folks on responding to any incoming inquiries we get and make sure you see the responses before they go.

Let us know if you have concerns. Thanks for all your help.

Hi Kyle,

Please find my edits tracked and one comment in the attached. I used what you sent yesterday, so this may need to be updated with the latest OGC edits.

Also, please let me know once DF has approved, LZ may want to see as well. Thank you!

Hi Cora,

OGC leadership has now reviewed and their edits are incorporated. Here's the link to the revised version. Once OPA has reviewed and is satisfied with the draft, we've been asked to run it by DF once more but then should be good to publish.

Thanks, and please let us know if you have any thoughts/questions/are otherwise good with the draft website.

Thanks in advance, and I'll keep you posted as soon as we heard back from OGC leadership on the track changes language (hopefully today *fingers crossed*).

Hi Cora,

Per a deliverable from our briefing of ADM last week, we pulled together a draft website on single fluorinated carbon compounds that would accompany a listserv. There was a lot of back-and-forth with our program career staff on the content for that draft website, which I think we finally got nailed down early this afternoon. We're sending that to OGC momentarily, with the plan for them to review by tomorrow.

We can send to you/OPA that draft website content, the draft listserv, and a draft desk statement for review tomorrow. Barring any major concerns from OPA, we could be in a position to send out the listserv by late tomorrow/sometime on Thursday.

Does that timeline work for your needs?
