Subject: RE: A-S NFs Response to CBD letter (08/14/12) - ATV Outlaw Jamboree

Been out and about with some folks and will be gone again today to 4-FRI, but wanted to respond: First of all, any time we have met with the OHV Club to discuss issues relating to the commercial aspects of their event, we come away with a tightening of the Club's intentions to be outside of any permit guidelines; they are "honing" their responses based on the critical issues being called into question. The Club readily admit mistakes in the website and in the printed material - there are several references relating to 2011 instead of 2012 in the Jamboree publication. The group has apologized for not having all material up to date and for not being proficient in web design, nor clean content. As such I do believe the club is serious about separating their activities from national forest lands – they are struggling “to say what they mean”. We made it plain that all cross-country travel is prohibited within the Wallow fire area, with two exceptions - woodcutting and big game retrieval. Only roads and trails identified through the “white arrow” system are currently open - no exceptions, we are currently using a July 2012 map showing those open roads and trails. We will have folks out on patrol and monitoring to assure no commercial use is occurring. We will cite individual offenders, organizers, or both if see violations have taken place. We will be working with FS law enforcement and other agencies for compliance issues.

Jim,

You realize the version of the event as described in the (very recently published) newsletter for the jamboree flies in the face of what the letter from the organizers to you says? What you now say you believe, is contrary to the written and published words of the organizers, yes?

You can't legitimately be telling me you are taking the word of the organizers over the words in the newsletter and the jamboree website, can you? Their website is continuously updated, yet for the better part of 2012 it has indicated they will in FACT be organizing and guiding these trail rides. They are also advertizing and publishing these trails, contrary to what you and the organizers previously told me.

How can you explain the registration form, which charges more for “riders” than non-riders? (from their very recently published newsletter)
